

2002 Census Population Distribution as per 2012 Population Census Administrative Units

The National Bureau of Statistics aggregated population distribution by administrative areas between 2002 and 2012 Population and Housing Censuses to allow policy makers, programme managers to make use of this information development planning according to the boundaries existed between two censuses. This kind of the information will allow analysts to establish population growth for the new administrative areas (districts and regions), population densities and other socio economic variables from national to the village level.

Geographical boundaries of the 2002 Census between certain districts and regions were changed in the 2012 Census in United Republic of Tanzania. There were geographical codes changes at all levels including: regional level; district level; ward level; village level and sub-village level.

The United Republic of Tanzania, in 2002 population Census had 25 regions and in 2012 census had 30 regions. These changes were administratively taking place whereby some of the sub-villages were upgraded into villages. Some villages of the 2002 Census were upgraded into wards; and some of the wards were sub-divided into more than one ward. Out of 25 regions in Mainland Tanzania, only two regions were not affected by the boundary changes, and these are Lindi and Dar es Salaam Regions.

In the process of changing boundaries, five new regions were formed in Tanzania Mainland i.e. Rukwa, Geita, Katavi, Simiyu and Manyara.

In this context, the NBS thought that there is a need of aggregating this information into user friendly manner that will allow stakeholders to make use of this information to inform decision making at all levels and of course as we approaching 2015 development agenda, data revolution becomes imperative in terms of providing evidence based in the 17 Sustainable Development Goals and 169 targets.

The following tables presents a re-arrangement of the 2002 Census boundaries for all wards, districts and regions to match with those boundaries created before the 2012 Censuses. DfID supported financially this exercise.
